

S W I

- Firm we subside, yet possible to swerve. Milton.
Many who, through the contagion of ill example, swerve exceedingly from the rules of their holy faith, yet would upon such an extraordinary warning be brought to comply with them. Atterbury's Sermon.
3. To ply; to bend.
Now their mightiest quell'd, the battle swerv'd
With many an inroad gor'd. Milton.
4. [I know not whence derived.] To climb on a narrow body.
Ten wildings have I gather'd for my dear,
Upon the topmost branch, the tree was high,
Yet nimbly up from bough to bough I swerv'd. Dryden.
She fled, returning by the way she went,
And swerv'd along her bow with swift ascent. Dryden.
- SWIFT, adj. [from swif, Saxon.]
1. Moving far in a short time; quick; fleet; speedy; nimble; rapid.
Thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompence is slow
To overtake thee. Shakespeare.
Yet are these feet, whose strengthless stay is numb,
Unable to support this lump of clay,
Swift-winged with desire to get a grave. Shakespeare.
Men of war, whose faces were like the faces of lions, and as swift as the roes upon the mountains. Chron. xii. 8.
We imitate and practise to make swifter motions than any out of other markets. Bacon.
- To him with swift ascent he up return'd.
Things that move to swift as not to affect the senses distinctly, with several distinguishable distances of their motion, and so cause not any train of ideas in the mind, are not perceived to move. Locke.
- It preserves the ends of the bones from incalcebrancy, which they, being solid bodies, would contract from any swift motion. Ray.
- Thy stumbling founder'd jade can trot as high
As any other Pegasus can fly;
So the dull eel moves nimbler in the mud,
Than all the swift fin'd racers of the flood. Dorset.
- Clouded in a deep abyss of light,
While present, too severe for human sight,
Nor staying longer than one swift-wing'd night. Prior.
Mantiger made a circle round the chamber, and the swift- footed martin pursued him. Arbutnot.
- There too my son,—ah once my best delight,
Once swift of foot, and terrible in fight. Pope's Odyssey.
Stretch their broad plumes, and float upon the wind. Pope.

He made intricate seem straight,
To mischief swift. Milton.
- SWIFT, n. f. [from the quickness of their flight.]
1. A bird like a swallow; a martin.
Swift and swallows have remarkably short legs, and their toes grasp any thing very strongly. Derham.
2. The current of a stream.
He can live in the strongest swift of the water. Walton.
- SWIFTLY, adv. [from swift.] Fleetly; rapidly; nimbly; with celerity; with velocity.
These move swiftly, and at great distance; but then they require a medium well-disposed; and their transmission is casily stopped. Bacon's Natural History.
- Pleas'd with the passage, we slide swiftly on,
And see the dangers which we cannot shun. Dryden.
In decent order they advance to light;
Yet then too swiftly fleet by human sight,
And meditate too soon their everlasting flight. Prior.
- SWIFTHNESS, n. f. [from swift.] Speed; nimbleness; rapidity;
quickness; velocity; celerity.
Let our proportions for these wars
Be soon collected, and all thing thought upon;
That may with reasonable swiftness add
More feathers to our wings. Shakespeare's Henry V.
- We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at;
And lose by over running. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
- Speed to describe whole swiftness number fails. Milton.
Exulting, till he finds their nobler sense
Their disproportion'd speed does recompense;
Then curses his conspiring feet, whose scent
Betrays that safety which their swiftness lent. Denham.
- Such is the mighty swiftness of your mind,
That like the earth's, it leaves our sense behind. Dryden.
- To SWIG, v. n. [from swiga, Icelandic.] To drink by large draughts.
To SWILL, v. a. [from swill, Saxon.]
1. To drink luxuriously and grossly.
The wretched, bloody, and usurping boar
That spoil'd your summer fields and fruitful vines,
Swills your warm blood like wash, and makes his trough
In your embow'd bosoms. Shakespeare's Richard III.

The third night's profits of his play;
His morning draughts till noon can swill,
Among his brethren of the quill. Swift.
2. To wash; to drench.
As fearfully as doth a galled rock
O'erhang and jutty his confounded base,
Swill'd with the wild and wasteful ocean. Shakespeare.
With that a German oft has swill'd his throat,
Deluded, that imperial Rhine bestow'd
The generous rummer. Philips.
3. To inebriate.
I should be loth
To meet the rudeness and swill'd insolence
Of such late wallowers. Milton.
He drinks a swilling draught; and lin'd within,
Will supple in the bath his outward skin. Dryden.
- SWILL, n. f. [from the verb.] Drink, luxuriously poured down.
Give wine such swill as you have. Mortimer.
Thus as they swim, in mutual swill the talk Reels fast from theme to theme. Thomson.

Saxon; swemmen, Dutch.]
1. To float on the water; not to sink.
I will scarce think you have swam in a gondola. Shakespeare.
We have ships and boats for going under water, and brook-ing of seas; also swimming-girdles and supporters. Bacon.
2. To move progressively in the water by the motion of the limbs.
Leap in with me into this angry flood,
And swim to yonder point. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.
I have ventur'd,
Like little wanton boys that swim on bladders,
These many summers in a sea of glory;
But far beyond my depth. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
The soldiers counsel was to kill the prisoners, lest any of them should swim out and escape. Acts xxvii. 42.
The rest driven into the lake, where seeking to save their lives by swimming, they were slain in coming to land by the Spanish horsemen, or else in their swimming shot by the har-quebusiers. Kneller.
- Animals swim in the same manner as they go, and need no other way of motion for natation in the water, than for progression upon the land. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- The frighted wolf now swims among the sheep,
The yellow lion wanders in the deep;
The flag swims faster than he ran before. Dryden.
Blue Triton gave the signal from the shore,
The ready Nereids heard and swam before, Dryden.
To smooth the seas.
3. To be conveyed by the stream.
With tenders of our protection of them from the fury of those who would soon drown them, if they refused to swim down the popular stream with them. King Charles.
I swam with the tide, and the water under me was buoyant.
Dryden.
4. To glide along with a smooth or dizzy motion.
She with pretty and with swimming gate
Follying, her womb then rich with my young squire
Would imitate. Shakespeare.
A hovering mist came swimming o'er his sight,
And seal'd his eyes in everlasting night. Dryden.
My slack hand dropt, and all the idle pomp,
Priests, altars, victims swam before my sight! Smith.
The fainting soul flood ready wing'd for flight,
And o'er his eye-balls swam the shades of night. Pope.
5. To be dizzy; to be vertiginous.
I am taken with a grievous swimming in my head, and such a mist before my eyes, that I can neither hear nor see. Dryden.
6. To be floated.
When the heavens are filled with clouds, when the earth swims in rain, and all nature wears a lowering countenance, I withdraw myself from these uncomfortable scenes into the visionary worlds of art. Addison's Spectator.
- Sudden the ditches swell, the meadows swim. Thomson.
7. To have abundance of any quality; to flow in any thing.
They now swim in joy,
Ere long to swim at large, and laugh; for which
The world a word of tears must weep. Milton.

leave some air, else the liquor cannot play nor flower. Bacon.
Swinging a red-hot iron about, or fastening it unto a wheel under that motion, it will sooner grow cold. Brown.
- Swing* thee in the air, then dash thee down,
To th' hazard of thy brains and shatter'd sides. Milton.
3. To wave loosely.
If one approach to dare his force,
He swings his tail, and swiftly turns him round. Dryden.
- SWING, n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Motion of any thing hanging loosely.
In casting of any thing, the arms, to make a greater swing, are first cast backward. Bacon's Natural History.
Men use a pendulum, as a more steady and regular motion than that of the earth; yet if any one should ask how he certainly knows that the two successive swings of a pendulum are equal, it would be very hard to satisfy him. Locke.
2. A line on which any thing hangs loose.
3. Influence or power of a body put in motion.
The iron that batters down the wall,
For the great swing and rudeness of his poize.
They place before his hand that made the engine. Shakspeare.
In this encyclopedia; and round of knowledge, like the great wheels of heaven, we're to observe two circles, that, while we are daily carried about, and whirled on by the swing and rapt of the one, we may maintain a natural and proper course in the sober wheel of the other. Brown.
The descending of the earth to this orbit is not upon that mechanical account Cartesius pretends, namely, the strong swing of the more solid globuli that overflow it. Merc.
4. Course; unrestrained liberty; abandonment to any motive.
Each un-
Commit, even to the full swing of his lust. Chapman.
Take thy swing;
For not to take, is but the self-same thing. Dryden.

S W I

- Let them all take their swing
To pillage the kings,
And get a blue ribband instead of a string. Swift.
5. Unrestrained tendency.
Where the swing goeth, there follow, fawn, flatter, laugh, and lie lustily at other mens liking. Ascham's Schoolmaster.
These exuberant productions only excited and fomented his lusts; so that his whole time lay upon his hands, and gave him leisure to contrive and with full swing pursue his follies. Wood.
Those that are so persuaded, desire to be wife in a way that will gratify their appetites, and so give up themselves to the swing of their unbounded propensities. Glanv. Scep. Preface.
Were it not for these, civil government were not able to stand before the prevailing swing of corrupt nature, which would know no honesty but advantage. South.
- To SWINGE, v. a. [from swing, Saxon.]
1. To whip; to bastinate; to punish.
Sir, I was in love with my bed: I thank you, you swing'd me for my love, which makes me the bolder to chide you for yours. Shakspeare's Two Gent. of Verona.
This very rev'rend lecher, quite worn out
With rheumatisms, and crippled with his gout,
Forgets what he in youthful times has done,
And swinges his own vices in his son. Dryd. jun. Juvenal.
